Green Living: Shipping Boxes

It makes good environmental sense to reuse shipping boxes, but often the outside of the box is cluttered with old mailing labels, bar codes, and tape. There is a simple solution. Cut through the old tape to completely disassemble the box. You can then recreate the box inside out so that the outside is clean and label-free. Depending on how the box is constructed, you may need to tape an extra seam, but it makes for a nice new-looking box to reuse.

Be aware that if you do this with a USPS Priority Mail box, then the postal service will only accept it if you're reusing it for Priority Mail. The box is stamped "Priority Mail" on the inside, which is now the outside!

Thoughts from Richard Steed

What's in a month? Well, in this month, there are 31 days. This got me to thinking about how we keep "storage" of our minutes. We stack them into hours, file the hours into days, box the days into months, pallet the months into years, warehouse the years into decades . . . and on it goes. We collect them into something that is seemingly more tangible and easier to relate to.

How odd might it be, for example, if we just numbered the days consecutively? Even if we started anew each year, it would be really weird. "Okay, we're set to meet on day 115 at 1:15 for lunch. See you in 46 days!" And if we didn't start each year anew, it would be a nightmare. When does day 734,560 fall anyway? In fall? No? Spring, summer, winter? What would happen to May Day?

Storage, even of days, is a very useful thing! Okay, now I'm sure the more astute among you have already seen where I'm headed with this. But surely you can forgive me for touting the value of storage—even if I'm doing so in a rather kooky way.

No . . . we don't literally pile days into file cabinets. And it can still be challenging keeping up with them even using Google Calendar! But having weeks, months and consecutively numbered years in which to place their context certainly helps us interact sanely with one another. We can say, "Hey, remember that great game last February 5th?" and our friends will know what we're talking about . . . just as you can give us a specific file to pull for you—thanks to yet another great system of organized storage—and we can have it for you in jiffy.

It makes me happy to know we're the place you come to for your tangible storage needs. Thanks for giving us that responsibility this month of May, also known as "Days 122-153." Er, except it's a leap year so I guess that makes it "Days 123-154." Anyway, I'm working hard to make sure you have the opportunity to live all 31 one of them to the fullest!

Window Safety

The windows in your home protect you from the elements, but you do need to take care when opening and closing them. Here are some basic precautions to take with the windows in your house.

- Do not push on the glass to open the window, as this can cause the glass to break and cut your hand and arm.

- Don't depend on window screens to keep a child safe. These screens can pop out easily and are not designed to withstand the weight of a person.

- If there are children under the age of ten, install window guards. These will keep a young child from falling out of an open window.

- Make sure that your windows can open and close easily. Because windows offer an escape route in an emergency, you should be able to open them with ease.

- Windows can be manufactured with laminated glass. This will not keep them from being broken when struck with a stray baseball or rock, but it will keep the glass pieces from falling into your home. The plastic interlayer is also puncture-resistant, which can offer some protection from home intruders.

New Lawyer

A young lawyer, just graduated from law school, returned to his hometown to start up a law practice on his own. He knew he had to make a good impression to get clients to start coming to him.

On his first day in his new office, he saw a man approaching his door. Just before the man walked in, the lawyer lifted up the receiver on his phone and began talking. He continued on for several minutes, making the man wait, talking about an important case he had just concluded, and how he would be busy for quite some time to come. He continually gestured to the man to wait.

After hanging up the phone, he said, "What can I do for you?" The man said, "Nothing. I'm from the phone company and I'm here to hook up your phone."

Quick Tips: Travel

If you're gearing up for a road trip this summer, take some time first to give your car a good cleaning. Because a road trip can generate lots of trash—trash you can't get away from when spending so much time on the road—you want to make sure you aren't starting with chaos when you begin.

Then, while traveling, make it a point to attend to any and all trash in the car with every bathroom break. Most rest areas have plenty of trash containers, so have everyone carry their trash to a container on the way to the bathroom. It piles up fast, so be sure to dispose of all non-recyclable food wrappers, etc, that has accumulated. Have everyone pitch in and you'll have your car ready for the next leg of your adventure in no time!

Protecting Your Privacy During the COVID-19 Pandemic

During these challenging times, protecting your privacy is more important than ever. Scammers are exploiting the COVID-19 pandemic to prey on businesses and consumers. The Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), Federal Trade Commission (FTC), Federal Communications Commission (FCC), and World Health Organization (WHO) have issued warnings about various COVID-19-related scams.

Because of limited availability of Coronavirus testing, many fraudsters have launched widespread texting and robocall schemes, promising free testing kits or offering vaccines or medications. Protect yourself by hanging up the phone and blocking the sender's number. If you suspect you've fallen victim to a COVID-19-related scam, call law enforcement immediately.

Small businesses are receiving phone calls or phishing emails related to emergency funding or loans. Never share personal or business information over the phone and do not click on suspicious email links. You can check the authenticity of loan programs by visiting the websites of your local, state, and federal government.

As Zoom becomes the preferred platform for hosting and attending video conferences, hackers are hijacking many online meetings. To prevent your Zoom meeting from being "zoom-bombed," do not share your meeting link on public forums. When hosting a Zoom meeting, allow only signed-in users to join, disable file sharing, and lock the meeting.

Fraudsters know no limit when preying on health fears and financial panic. Meanwhile, take the same precaution with your privacy as you do with your well-being. Stay vigilant and stay healthy.
